B DID System Cards - Starter Guide

The DID system cards are a tool to help you create a picture of your internal system. When you first start learning about your system it can be helpful to begin to identify the strongest voices or personalities that you hear or feel for a number of reasons. Here are a few of the potential benefits:

- Discover their history to help understand your own timeline of traumatic experiences
- Learn about both their triggers and what helps them feel safe
- Track how your system changes over time
- Help your care team or therapist get a more visual understanding of your system

As you understand more about your system, how you view your alters or parts will likely morph and change over time. So even though these are printable resources your system is not static or unchangeable. We encourage you to revisit the cards and update them or create new ones if that is helpful for you.

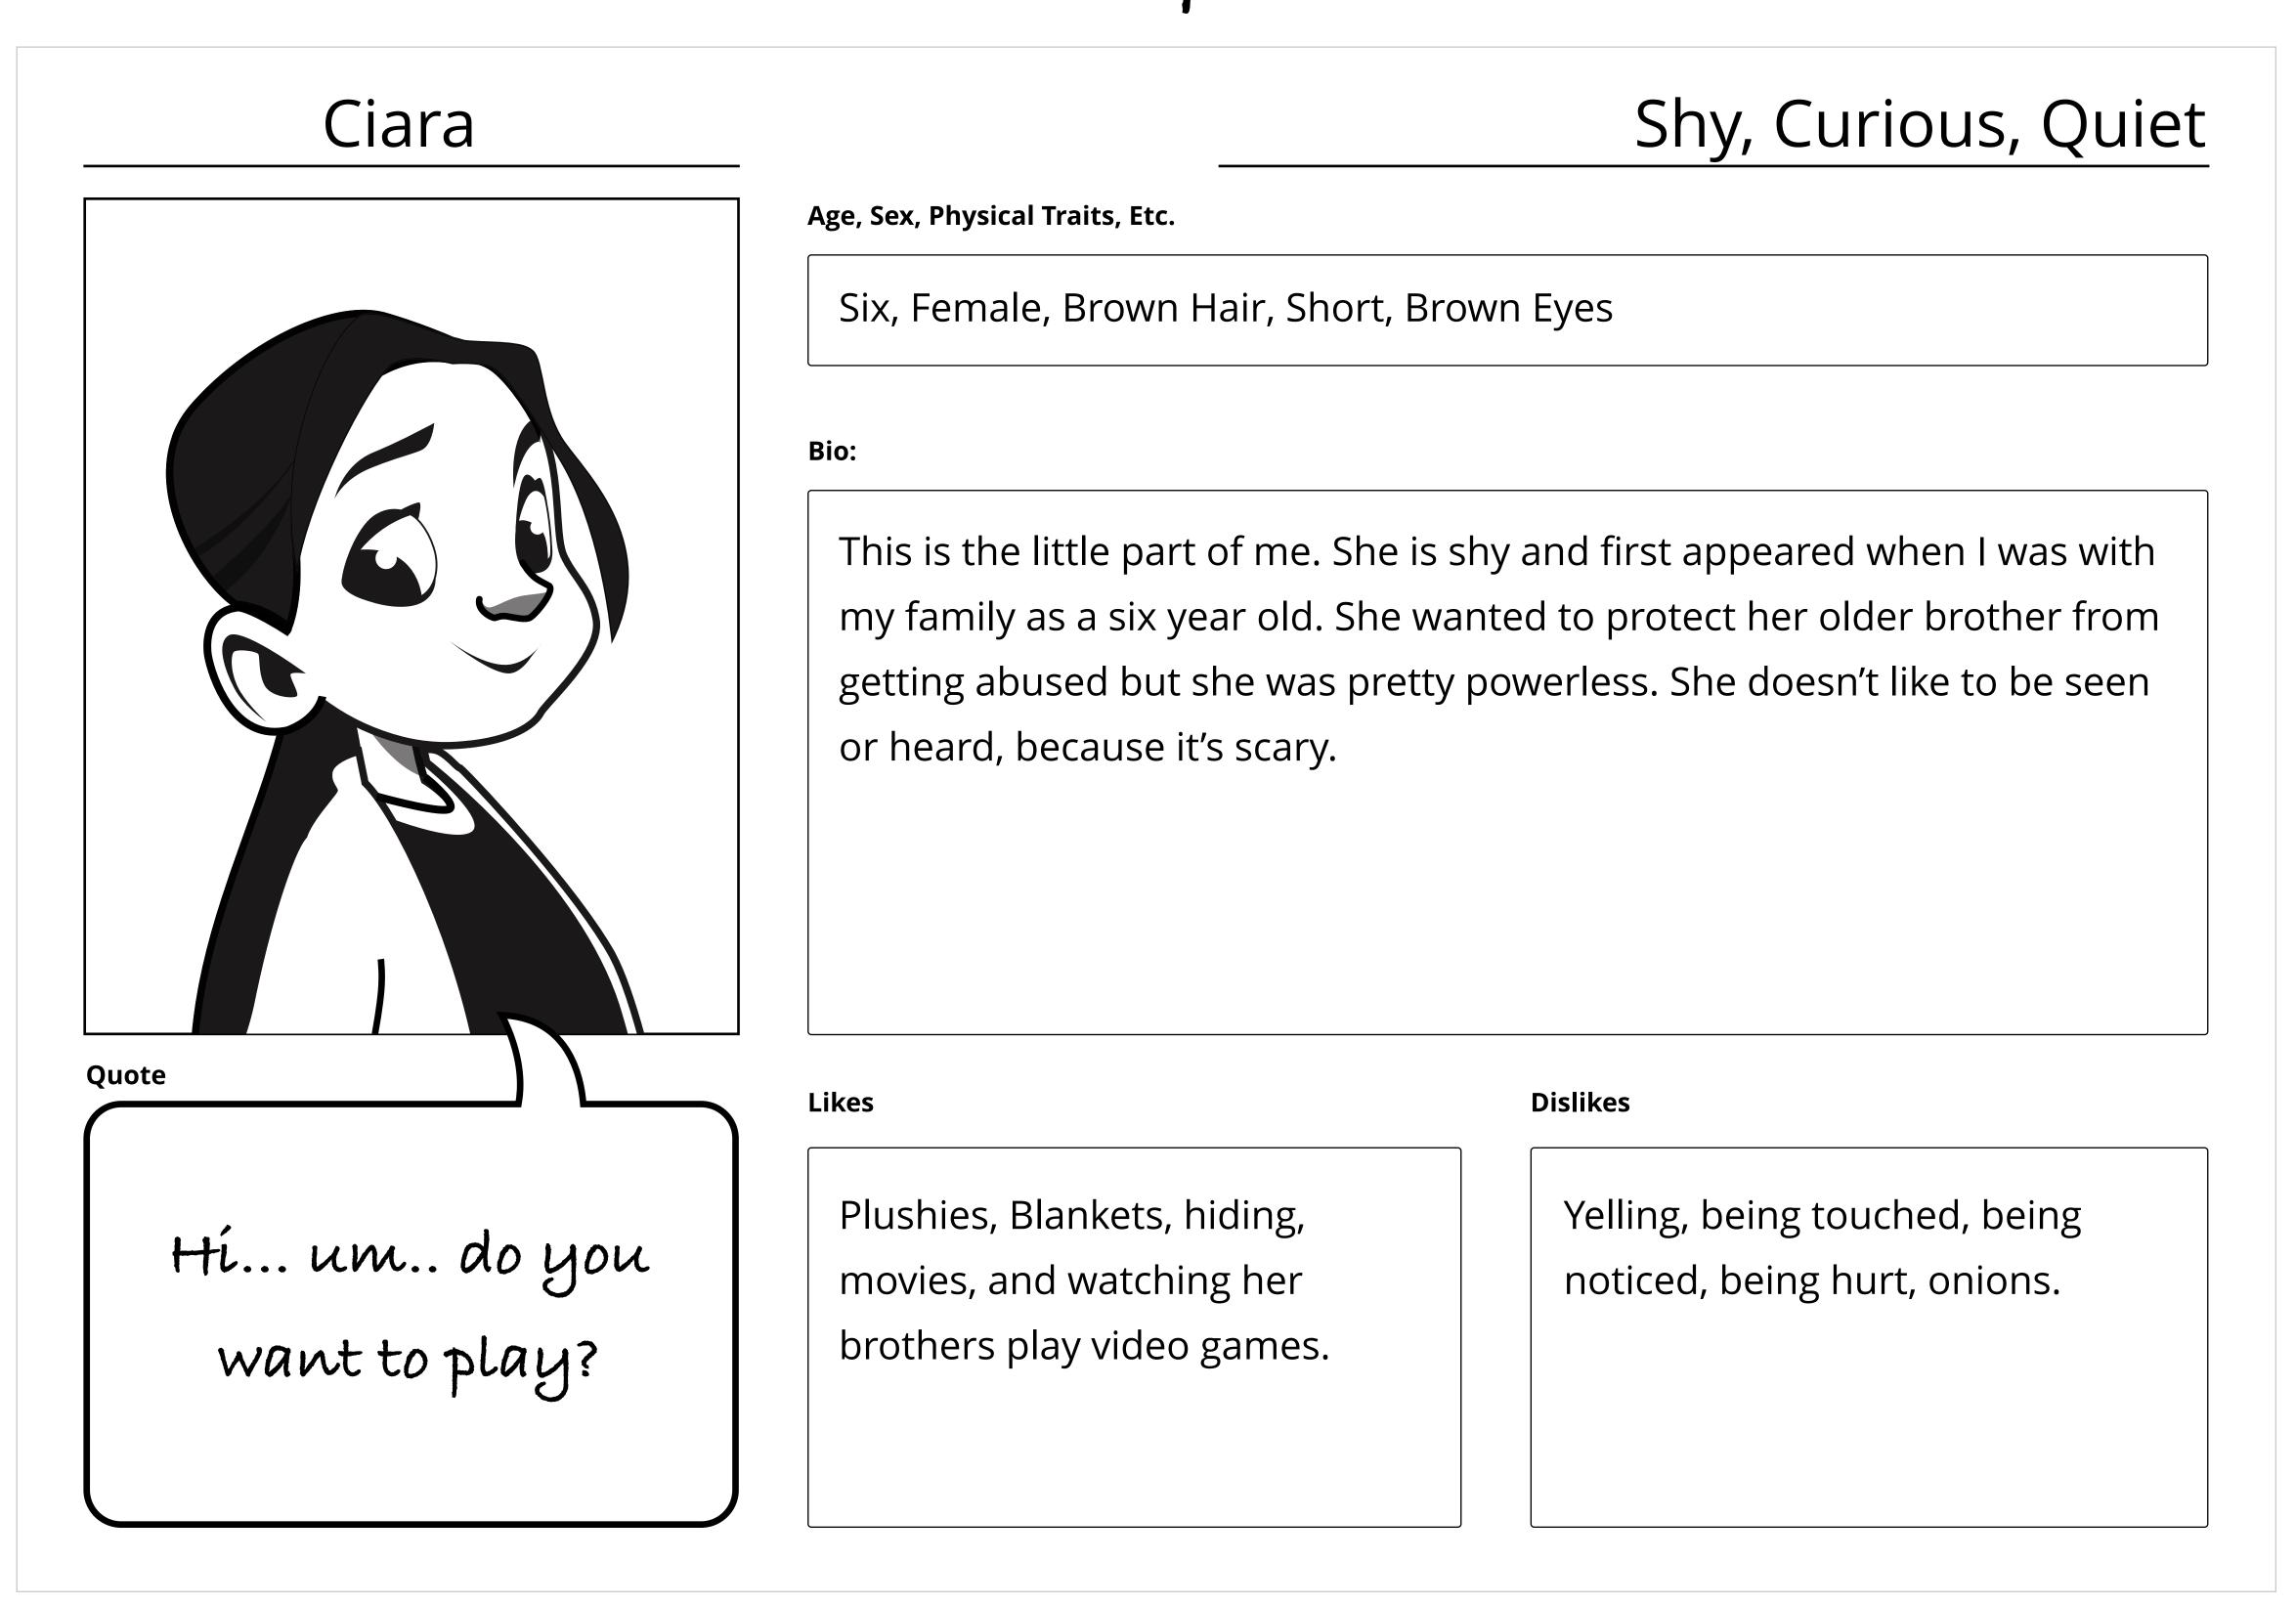

You might even find that this tool may become less useful over time as you start to become more comfortable with your system. For many systems, parts/alters will often blend with one another, display co-consciousness, or co-front creating new "flavors" of yourself, so-to-speak. You may even find out that you have fragments or sub-parts and sub-systems. So while this tool can serve as an initial starting point, please know that systems are often far more complex than represented through the cards.

Here are some examples of how you might fill in a card. Feel free to use these as flexibly as you would like. If you want to cross out labels and replace them, go for it! You can also use the back sides of the cards to add more detail.
